ABSTRACT

<<Your Project Abstract>> Brain tumors represent a substantial source of morbidity and mortality on a global scale. Early Identification and precise diagnosis are crucial for successful treatment outcomes. MRI has emerged as a key diagnostic tool for brain cancers, but interpreting these scans is time-consuming and requires significant expertise. Deep Learning (DL) & Image Processing Techniques offer promising solutions to this problem. This project introduces a DL-based approach for identifying brain tumors from MRI scans. The proposed approach involves image preprocessing, feature extraction & classification using supervised ML Algorithms, such as Convolutional Neural Networks (CNN). The method involves preprocessing the MRI scans using various techniques, including filtering and segmentation, to remove noise and highlight potential tumor regions and take characteristics like intensity, shape & texture out of the previously processed pictures using various image processing Techniques. These features are then used to train and test the DL models, which predict whether an MRI scan contains a tumor or not. The effectiveness of the proposed method in accurately identifying brain tumors is substantiated by an evaluation conducted on a large dataset of MRI scans obtained from both healthy individuals and patients with brain tumors. The CNN models demonstrate notable levels of accuracy & sensitivity, indicating their potential for use in Clinical settings. The project carries significant potential to advance early identification and diagnosis of brain tumor, there by contributing to better patient outcomes and a reduction in mortality rates (Please mention your project abstract).
